Course Information

Objectives

- To review their epidemiology and the risk factors for developing healthcare associated colonization and infection
- To review the evidence supporting commonly utilized infection prevention and control strategies and antibiotic stewardship programs
- To be able to effectively respond to questions about exposure to communicable diseases and appropriate prevention and control strategies for healthcare associated infections
- To understand the impact that healthcare associated infections play in patient safety

Recommended Audience

Physicians and other healthcare providers including infectious diseases, pulmonary, and critical care fellows, residents and other practitioners interested in healthcare associated infections and antimicrobial resistance.

Course Structure

Individuals will spend three days with world-renowned faculty from various specialties for introductory infection control training. Participants should be available from 7:30 am to 5:00 pm on Tuesday, July 7th through Thursday, July 9th, 2009. Shuttle transportation will be available between the course site (Pre-Clinical Teaching Building) and course hotel (Peabody Court Hotel). Please refer to our website for additional information regarding hotel accommodation and registration:
