Public transportation

The Maryland Transit Administration provides numerous transportation options to the East Baltimore campus.

Below are brief descriptions of four options available to get you to campus via public transportation.

Metro

The metro subway runs from Owings Mills Mall, through downtown Baltimore, and ends at the hospital below Broadway. This is a great option if you live in the Northwest suburbs of Baltimore.

Light Rail

The light rail runs from Hunt Valley, south to the BWI Thurgood Marshall Airport. One can take the light rail into the city and then connect to the JHMI-Homewood Shuttle at Penn Station.

Bus

The bus system has local lines that run to JHMI including routes from Canton, Fells Point and Patterson Park, as well as several express lines that run from commuter lots in the suburbs.

- Baltimore City CityLink Brown (BR) bus has a stop in front of the Viragh Building.
- The Charm City Circulator stop was reinstated in front of the Viragh Building as well, on the Green route.

The northbound stop is on the Viragh side, and the southbound stop is directly across Broadway Street.

MARC train

The MARC train runs from Washington, D.C. to Baltimore. You can ride to Penn Station and then take the JHMI-Homewood Shuttle to campus.
