

History

Johns Hopkins All Children's Hospital, founded in 1926, is a member of Johns Hopkins Medicine, one of the world's premier, integrated health systems. Johns Hopkins Medicine includes six hospitals with Johns Hopkins All Children's the only one outside the Maryland/Washington, D.C., area.

Johns Hopkins All Children's Hospital treats patients from throughout Florida and beyond, including around the world. The Johns Hopkins All Children's International Program includes multilingual international coordinators who facilitate culturally sensitive patient- and family-centered care.

Locations

In addition to the hospital campus in St. Petersburg, Johns Hopkins All Children's is building a 56-bed hospital in Wesley Chapel that is expected to open in 2027. Johns Hopkins All Children's also has outpatient care locations throughout west-central Florida, as far south as Fort Myers. All Children's Specialty Physicians provide care through collaborations with community and regional hospitals throughout the region.
