

Johns Hopkins Rehabilitation Network Wound Management Physical Therapy Residency

Program Goals

Considering limited availability of formal post-graduate training programs in wound management and burn rehabilitation, we are committed to increasing the number of:

- Highly skilled wound and burn physical therapy clinicians for the community
- Quality educators for the physical therapy profession
- Clinicians who are involved in scholarly activity and research within the field

Program Features

Patient Care

- The opportunity to practice wound management in a variety of settings including an outpatient wound center, an American Burn Association regionally verified burn center, and an array of inpatient hospital units
- 1,792 hours of independent clinical practice through direct patient care as Johns Hopkins employees: On average at least 31 hours per week over 16 months
- Shadowing various procedures and surgeries with referring providers from plastic and burn surgery

Mentorship

- 256 hours of one-on-one mentorship (average of 4 hours per week) by certified wound specialists and physical therapists with expertise in the fields of wound management and burn rehabilitation
- 192 hours of co-treatment with a mentor
- 64 hours of academic mentorship

Instruction

- 672 hours of didactic curriculum provided by wound management professionals

Research and Conferences

- Participation in research activities
- Conference attendance to at least one of the following: The American Burn Association Conference, APTA Combined Sections Conference, Symposium on Advanced Wound Care, Stepping Stones to Excellence in Wound Care
