

The History of Johns Hopkins Medicine and Beyond

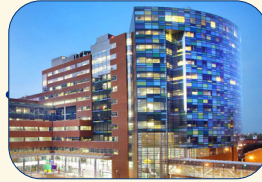

In celebration of Johns Hopkins Medicine's 25-year anniversary in 2021, take a trip through history to see how we've grown together as an organization through the years.

1889
The Johns Hopkins Hospital opens under philanthropist Johns Hopkins' vision for a hospital linked with a medical school that is part of a university, all bearing his name.

1893
The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine admits its first class of 18 students, including three women (not pictured).

1964
Johns Hopkins Children's Center is established with the opening of the Children's Medical and Surgical Center.

1984
Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center, then known as Baltimore City Hospitals, is acquired.

1996
Johns Hopkins Medicine is formed, uniting the Johns Hopkins Health System with the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

1995
Johns Hopkins HealthCare, initially called Johns Hopkins Employer Health Programs, is formed.

1992
Johns Hopkins Home Care Group, Inc. is formed as an umbrella corporation for multiple home-based services.

1986
The Wyman Park Health System is acquired, eventually adopting the name Johns Hopkins Community Physicians in 2003.

1998
Howard County General Hospital in Columbia, Maryland, becomes a member of Johns Hopkins Medicine.

1998
Johns Hopkins Medicine International is established as a global ambassador of the Johns Hopkins Medicine mission.

2009
Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, Maryland, becomes a member of Johns Hopkins Medicine.

2010
Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington, D.C., becomes a member of Johns Hopkins Medicine.

2011
All Children's Hospital in St. Petersburg, Florida, which is now known as Johns Hopkins All Children's Hospital, becomes a member of Johns Hopkins Medicine. The name change took place in 2016 to reflect its academic role.