A Woman's Journey

More than 20 years ago, two remarkable Baltimoreans approached Johns Hopkins Medicine with an idea that would affect the lives of thousands of women. Both survivors of cancer, Mollye Block and Harriet Legum wanted to empower women to make effective health care decisions for themselves and those they love. Johns Hopkins Medicine accepted their challenge.

The result has been a powerful health conference, A Woman's Journey. Since 1995, this one-of-a-kind health education program has annually offered seminars—all taught by Johns Hopkins faculty physicians and scientists. Women hear firsthand about advances in medicine—from preserving memory to surviving cancer—from people who are performing research in these medical specialties. Mothers, daughters, sisters and friends come to learn from Hopkins scientists and from each other. Each year women confide in us that A Woman's Journey has saved their lives and improved their health.

A Woman's Journey Baltimore includes keynotes at both the breakfast plenary and lunch with the faculty. Each registrant has the opportunity to select four of 32 seminars, all presented by Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine faculty physicians.

National Chairs Harriet C. Legum and Kelly Geer Ripken collaborate with a 25-person local host committee and a 20-member Faculty Advisory Committee.
