

Johns Hopkins Medicine is Vaccinating People for COVID-19 in Maryland, Washington, D.C., and Florida

Governments determine how much COVID-19 vaccine we receive, and who is eligible to receive the vaccine. Our current supply is extremely limited.

How Do I Get the COVID-19 Vaccine from Johns Hopkins Medicine?

1

We identify people who match the government and health department eligibility criteria for vaccination.

2

We randomly select individuals from a group of eligible people. The number of people selected is based on the limited supply of vaccine given to us.

3

We notify selected people by phone, email or text message to offer them an opportunity to schedule a vaccination appointment.

If you are eligible for vaccination based on your place of employment, please contact your employer to find out how to get your vaccine.

Visit our website for updates on our vaccination plans:

To preserve phone line access for urgent medical needs, we cannot accept phone calls to schedule COVID-19 vaccinations at this time.
