History

While there were earlier demonstrations and activities by the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community, the Stonewall riots often are considered the beginning of LGBTQ+ Pride celebrations. In the early morning hours of June 28, 1969, armed police officers raided the Stonewall Inn on Christopher Street in Greenwich Village, the center of the LGBTQ+ community in Manhattan, New York. Gay and lesbian bar raids were a regular occurrence in the years preceding the Stonewall riots, but this raid — in which 13 patrons were arrested — represented a tipping point. Fed up, hundreds of people rioted, protested and fought back. A year after the riots, the last Sunday in June was celebrated as Gay Pride Day. In 1999, President William J. Clinton issued a proclamation in which Gay Pride Day was expanded to Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Pride Month. Today, Pride celebrates the spectrum of sexual orientations and gender identities.

In 2022, approximately 250 anti-LGBTQ+ bills have been introduced across numerous states, with several being enacted into law and currently being challenged in the courts, that threaten LGBTQ+ rights and healthcare. Many of these proposed laws are targeting transgender youth. There continues to be great concern in the LGBTQ+ community that the hard-won advances in civil rights will be negated. Harkening back to days of the Stonewall Riots, the current environment is a reminder that PRIDE is both a time of celebration and a renewal of commitment to continue to fight for civil rights and greater acceptance and inclusion of all LGBTQ+ people in our world.

Johns Hopkins supports the LGBTQ+ Community

On Oct. 11, 2011, National Coming Out Day, Johns Hopkins University launched its internal OUTList to connect its LGBTQ community with mentors, creating an informal network of supporters.

The Gertrude Stein Society, named after the former Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine student and well-known lesbian activist, is a student-led organization for LGBTQ+ and allied members of the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions, including the school of nursing, school of public health and school of medicine. The student leaders of GSS are dedicated to maintaining and developing an even more accepting environment for diversity at JHMI through community service, recruitment and advocacy.

Johns Hopkins Center for Transgender Health

In March 2017, the Center for Transgender Health, led by Paula M. Neira, clinical program director, and Devin O’Brien-Coon, medical director, opened its doors with the mission to reduce health care disparities and improve the overall health of the transgender community. The center provides affirming, objective, person-centered care to improve health and enhance wellness; educates interdisciplinary health care professionals to provide culturally competent, evidence-based care; informs the public on transgender health issues; and advances medical knowledge by conducting biomedical research. Thanks to the great work of the Center for Transgender Health, The Johns Hopkins Hospital performed its first genital gender affirming surgery in 38 years in August 2017. In 2022, Fan Liang became the center’s medical director and will lead the next phase of its evolution. Paula M. Neira is now the Program Director of LGBTQ+ Equity and Education for Johns Hopkins Medicine in the Office of Diversity, Inclusion and Health Equity.
