Johns Hopkins Community Engagement Inventory 2015

This is a working inventory of Johns Hopkins community engagement in Baltimore City, inclusive of student, staff and faculty participation in programs or organizations.
The Community Engagement Inventory was compiled and produced by the Johns Hopkins East Baltimore Community Affairs Office, a part of Government and Community Affairs (GCA).

Government and Community Affairs works to build and strengthen Johns Hopkins’ relationships with a wide variety of stakeholders whose interest and support are vital to the mission of Johns Hopkins. GCA staff members serve both the Johns Hopkins University and the Johns Hopkins Health System by representing and coordinating the efforts of both institutions at the federal, state, and local levels and in surrounding communities.

The East Baltimore Community Affairs Office represents the multi-institutional East Baltimore campus in planning, implementing and coordinating comprehensive approaches to community issues.

Through interfaces with a broad range of nonprofits and local community organizations working to improve health, education, housing, public safety, employment, and economic development within the East Baltimore community, the Office also plays a supporting role in a wide variety of community and economic

Autism and Special Needs Clinic

The Autism and Special Needs Clinic provides comprehensive mental health services for adults over the age of 18 with psychiatric illness and mild to moderate intellectual disability or developmental disabilities. In the past, psychiatric illness was often unrecognized and untreated in people with intellectual disability. There is a general agreement today that people with intellectual disability are more likely to suffer mental illness. The program was designed to meet the unique and complex needs of this patient population and is committed to providing expert assessment and treatment.

Cigarette Restitution Fund Program

In 2000, the Tobacco Master Settlement Agreement awarded $1 billion in tobacco settlement funds to Maryland. These funds were used to create a ten-year plan to fight cancer and other tobacco-related diseases (Senate Bill 896/House Bill 1425). This ongoing program that grew from the 10-year plan is known as the Cigarette Restitution Fund Program (CRFP). Johns Hopkins Kimmel Cancer Center is a partner in research and implementation of CRFP.

Baltimore Rescue Mission Clinic

Every Wednesday, Hopkins undergraduates volunteer, helping to provide free, high-quality medical care to the homeless population of Baltimore City. Students have the advantage of both interacting directly with patients and working with the doctor to develop an assessment and therapeutic plan. Students are able to work in a setting where they assume the role of a caregiver, in that they communicate extensively with homeless patients, take a detailed medical history, reach a diagnosis, and administer the proper treatment. Basic physical examinations are also performed. The clinic gives an in-depth overview of what urban medicine is about.

Black Mental Health Alliance

Johns Hopkins’ Office of Diversity and Cultural Competence entered into a partnership and consortium which will work together to carry out the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration Recovery Community Services Program. The grant proposal, titled “The Phoenix Project,” targets young African American men in Baltimore City who have a history of substance use or mental illness; are involved in the criminal justice system; are veterans; or are estranged from their families and/or dependent children. The goal of the project is to help men in various stages of recovery to prevent relapse and to help them progress toward life-long recovery, and ultimately sobriety. The idea of the project is to help African American men “Arise as the Phoenix” from the ashes, and experience healing, hope and change.

B’More for Healthy Babies
B’More for Healthy Babies is built on the realization that reducing infant deaths will happen only if people throughout the community play a part—whether it’s the leaders of the key city agencies, physicians, nurses and social workers; community groups and teachers; or fathers, grandmothers, caregivers and pregnant women themselves. Since 2009, B’More for Healthy Babies has mobilized families, communities, health providers, and policymakers to prevent infant deaths and promote better family health. Nonprofit groups in three communities—Patterson Park North and East, Upton/Druind Heights and Greenmount East—receive funding and training to increase community involvement and collaboration at all levels of the service-delivery system.

CAPABLE

The Community Aging in Place—Advancing Better Living for Elders (CAPABLE) pilot is a client-centered home-based intervention to increase mobility, functionality, and capacity to “age in place” for low-income older adults. CAPABLE is comprised of an occupational therapist intervention, a client-centered nurse intervention and safety and access handyman services. Each service synergistically builds on the others by increasing the participants’ bio-psycho-functional capacity to function at home. This is theorized to avert costly health utilization by increasing medication management, problem-solving ability, strength, balance, nutrition, and home safety, while decreasing isolation, depression, and fall risk. The goal of the pilot is to assess feasibility, titrate intervention dose, and understand tri-service coordination.

Colleges Against Cancer (American Cancer Society)

The goals of American Cancer Society on campus are to raise community awareness of methods of prevention, to raise funds to support research and patient support, and to unite the community within and immediately surrounding Hopkins in the struggle against cancer. The goals of the American Cancer Society will be met through groups such as Colleges Against Cancer and projects such as the Relay for Life. The group provides support for cancer-oriented community events, such as the breast cancer marches in Baltimore. Through the organization, the group supports those in the community who are going through treatment, and celebrates those who have survived. The ultimate goal is to eliminate this disease and bring the community together to support one another.

Community Care Initiative

The Community Care Initiative (CCI) focuses on connecting underserved communities with health education and providers. While most health events typically provide only information, CCI links long term care organizations with community members who could benefit from their services and educational resources. Organizations such as free clinics, nonprofit and government-run insurance groups, disease-based advocacy groups, and representatives of housing, employment, and legal agencies will be in attendance. Additionally, students and professionals from the graduate schools of Law, Nursing, Public Health, Medicine, and Dentistry at the University of Maryland and Medicine, Public Health and Nursing from the Johns Hopkins University are on hand to provide attendees with information, screenings and connections to resources at their respective organizations. The event itself traditionally takes place in late April or early May.

Community Health Action Project
The Community Health Action Project (CHAP) reflects Johns Hopkins Bayview’s partnerships in the community. In 1996, with the help of a consultant, a comprehensive community health assessment within a broad service area was conducted for the Bayview Medical Center under the direction of a community-dominated steering committee. The group determined its mission and vision, and selected prevention of heart disease as its goal. A strategic planning session identified a variety of strategies focused on nutrition/physical activity, smoking prevention and cessation and stress management. Three action teams were formed and are continually developing community-based programs to address CHAP’s goal. Community organizations, human service agencies, churches, businesses and schools are well-represented on the teams, and on the steering committee.

Community Health Initiative
The Urban Health Institute (UHI) is leading a collaborative effort to engage individuals, community groups, and city government from East Baltimore and Johns Hopkins in an intensive process of planning and critical thinking about how to best develop and implement a community health assessment. This is the first phase of a larger initiative, which aims to improve the health and well-being of residents of all ages who live in East Baltimore through sustainable health collaborations and specific health interventions. The health assessment will be conducted within five East Baltimore ZIP codes: 21202, 21205, 21213, 21224, and 21231. The UHI has committed resources to support the entire planning process. Five planning teams comprised of community residents, activists, service providers, and advocacy organizations, along with Johns Hopkins faculty, staff, and students have been established to help develop all aspects of the assessment.

Community Outreach Program

Community Outreach Program (COP) at the Johns Hopkins University’s School of Nursing is a service-learning collaboration among the Hopkins SON Department of Community-Public Health Nursing, SOURCE, and various community-based organizations. Hopkins SON Public Health Nursing Program established the COP in 1991 to improve the health of Baltimore’s urban community while engaging students in the complex practical issues surrounding public health. Primarily (but not exclusively) targeting East and Southeast Baltimore, the COP enables students and faculty to provide innovative community health care and education to individuals and families in urban inner-city neighborhoods. Ultimately, the program aims to prepare students to apply the lessons and skills learned in this environment to similar situations around the world.

Co-occurring Disorders in Adolescence (CODA) Clinic

The Co-occurring Disorders in Adolescence Clinic provides evidence-based substance abuse and mental health services to youth and young adults between ages 14 to 22. Admission requires a commitment to a minimum of 16 weeks which includes an initial evaluation with standardized assessment instruments, a diagnostic interview with the psychiatrist and 12 weeks of therapy which include one individual and one group session per week. Random drug screens and medication management are also provided. Treatment interventions follow an evidence-based protocol which includes (but not limited to) the use of motivational enhancement therapy and cognitive behavioral therapy.

Creative Alternatives
Creative Alternatives is an innovative program that serves adults who have serious and persistent mental illness and who have not benefited from traditional services. The program combines mental health treatment, rehabilitative services and assistance with daily living. Program participants (called members) have the opportunity for community integration and personal growth. Creative Alternatives works with members in hospitals, shelters, and in the community. On entering the program, members receive services from a team of professionals that includes a psychiatrist, nurse, case managers and community aides. A team member is available 24 hours a day in the event of a crisis or just to offer reassurance. Specialists in employment, social/recreational and entitlement programs also support the members.

Disaster Mental Health for Spiritual Caregivers

The Disaster Mental Health training consists of two parts: The first day of training is designed to build skills in providing psychological first aid to people in distress. The second day is designed to provide guidance to faith communities in the development of a disaster plan to implement in their congregations and communities during and after a disaster. The program provides a unique opportunity for learning in what may be, regrettably, an increasingly important field of human service.

Food as Medicine

Food as Medicine is a Johns Hopkins student group dedicated to improving the health and wellness of the students at two Baltimore City Public Schools. The program partners with Elementary/Middle schools to provide: (1) interactive health and nutrition workshops for students, (2) a health focused after-school program, and (3) school-wide health events. The weekly workshops address the Maryland Common Core Curriculum Standards for nutrition. The Food as Medicine program aims to promote healthy behavior changes by not only empowering students to think critically about leading healthy lives, but to also act on the lessons learned throughout the program. Together, the Food as Medicine participants and volunteers strive to promote a culture of health and wellness at the Elementary/Middle Schools.

HealthCare Access Maryland

Health Care Access of Maryland was established as a stand-alone nonprofit by the Baltimore City Health Department in 1997 to aid with the Medicaid transition to managed care. The original vision was to make Baltimore City a place where all people have equal access to health care and where there are no disparities in health outcomes based on income or race by making Baltimore healthier through connecting residents to insurance and care, educating the community about healthier living and advocating for a more equitable health care system. In 2011, the nonprofit expanded to encompass all of Maryland.

Intensive Psychiatric Services

Intensive Psychiatric Services (IPS) is an intensive outpatient program that is part of the continuum of services offered in Adult Outpatient Services. When a patient needs more support and treatment than is generally available in a traditional outpatient mental health setting, a referral may be made to IPS. A team of mental health professionals provide short-term, urgent psychiatric treatment for patients who are able to function safely while they continue to live in the community. Patients may attend the program in the morning, Monday through Friday. A typical treatment day may consist of an individual and two group psychotherapy sessions as well as medication reviews by the psychiatrist two to three times a week. Transportation is usually provided to and from the program each day. Upon discharge, most patients return to their former outpatient therapist.

Johns Hopkins Community Health Partnership (J-CHiP)
The Johns Hopkins Community Health Partnership (J-CHiP) focuses on people who need coordinated health care but often don’t get it, resulting in more illness, more complications and unnecessary hospital stays and emergency room visits. The Partnership is based on an integrated approach by health care teams that include nurse educators, nurse transition guides, physicians, case managers, clinical pharmacy specialists, health behavior specialists and community health workers, among others. These teams help patients get the care they need, in the place they need it, whether that’s at home, at a community health center, in a rehabilitation facility or in the hospital. Integrating care also means that each member of the team will have a better understanding of each patient and can personalize the care to his or her needs.

Johns Hopkins Children’s Safety Center (CSC)

The Children’s Safety Center opened in 1997 as the first-of-its-kind hospital-based safety resource center in the United States. Safety experts at the Johns Hopkins Children’s Safety Center work with both parents and health care providers every day answering questions, providing advice, and offering services and safety products in an effort to reduce unintentional injuries, the leading cause of death among children. Located in the Johns Hopkins Children’s Center adjacent to the Pediatric Emergency Department, the CSC is a home-like environment where families can try a variety of home safety products, receive free personalized safety education, and purchase low-cost safety products (e.g., smoke alarms and batteries, cabinet locks and latches, stair gates). The CSC has continued as a community service project and is open to all Johns Hopkins visitors. Since its inception, it has served more than 10,000 visitors and distributed thousands of safety products.

Mi Espacio

“Mi Espacio” is an afterschool youth leadership development program sponsored by CASA de Maryland. The primary goal of the program is to provide a supportive environment where Latino high school students can gain the confidence, skills and knowledge they need to graduate from high school and achieve their post-secondary dreams. The model aims to recognize the strengths of each individual as well as the collective power of group problem solving and community organizing. At least two workshops are offered each day, including photography, afterschool homework assistance, leadership development, financial literacy, college access, yoga, group problem solving and other personal and group enrichment sessions. The program works with Latino high school students throughout Baltimore City. The youth come to CASA de Maryland for these sessions and occasionally travel to Patterson Park or other nearby facilities.

NIEHS Center in Urban Environmental Health Community Outreach and Education Core (COEC)

At the crux of the NIEHS Center's philosophy on community-based research is that education is a critical and essential component of this process. COEC is an extension of this philosophy. Accordingly, COEC seeks to establish partnerships with credible community agencies so as to create the opportunity to respond to specific concerns identified by community leaders and residents. These types of effective partnerships generate mutually beneficial relationships and assure positive outcomes through the translation of information and outcomes from the NIEHS Center's research foci and facility cores into educational programs, into knowledge applied to public health and environmental health policy.

Stork's Nest

Stork's Nest, a cooperative project between the Zeta Phi Beta sorority, March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation and Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center, is an incentive program to encourage women to see their care provider early and often during pregnancy. Pregnant women are referred to a local Stork's Nest via their clinic, HMO or other health care facility where they are receiving prenatal care. The care providers of the mothers-to-be will determine if they need assistance. There are no specific requirements for mothers to be eligible for the program other than a displayed need for assistance. Once enough points are accumulated, mothers-to-be may schedule shopping appointments. Points are earned by obtaining regular prenatal care, educational classes and getting proper immunizations. Mothers may continue shopping at the Stork's Nest until their children are twelve months old.

The Access Partnership (TAP)

Launched in 2009 as a pilot program in two East Baltimore ZIP codes, TAP provides free specialty-care access to uninsured patients who live in the neighborhoods around The Johns Hopkins Hospital and Bayview Medical Center in coordination with their dedicated primary care clinicians. TAP proved so successful that it was expanded to include patients from five additional ZIP codes, bringing the total to seven: 21202, 21205, 21213, 21219, 21222, 21224, and 21231. The program is the first of its kind in Baltimore. To qualify, patients must live within the seven target ZIP codes, have a Johns Hopkins primary care provider, and be uninsured or underinsured due to low income.

Transitional Youth Program
This program is designed for young people, ages 16 to 22, who have psychiatric disorders (including substance abuse) and who face family, legal, social, medical, and environmental stresses. Services are coordinated between the child and adult outpatient programs to include the traditional outpatient services, case management, and vocational rehabilitation by staff specifically trained to access both systems. There is an on-site psychiatric rehabilitation program that is designed to address the development of pre-vocational, educational, social, and independent-living skills of transitional-age clients.

Trauma Survivors Network

The Trauma Survivors Network (TSN) is a partnership between the Injury Center and the American Trauma Society. Its goal is to ease the burden of injury and its consequences for patients and their families through the exchange of reliable information, education, peer support and, most importantly, promotion of self-management programs. Extensive research on the recovery process and psychology of injury and disability strongly indicates that full implementation of the TSN can have a positive impact on post-trauma outcomes.

901 Arts
Better Waverly’s 901 Arts is a volunteer-driven program which serves local youth within a roughly 10 by 10-block neighborhood catchment zone (approximately 1,000 homes). Eighty total youth participants range in age from 6 to 17 years old. Opportunities for youth include urban gardening (five local sites run in partnership with Baltimore Green Space), music (on-site music lessons in instruments ranging from guitar, bass, piano, violin and glockenspiel), and art (on site instruction in writing and fine arts). The program runs as an afterschool component during the school year and a 6-week summer program in the summer. To engage high school students, there is a teen discussion group, job assistance, and SAT/homework help. The mission of the group states a goal of “improving the life quality of youth through greening and education support.”

Baltimore Curriculum Project

The Baltimore Curriculum Project (BCP) has its origins at the Calvert School, which had been tasked with taking their method of direct teaching and adapting it for use in some of the public schools in Baltimore. BCP has been partnering with Baltimore City Schools for over 15 years. Their mission is to develop, implement, and advocate for an innovative, sustainable, and replicable education model that improves student outcomes. In so doing, the Baltimore Curriculum Project helps raise educational standards and opportunities for disadvantaged youth and Baltimore City schools. BCP empowers neighborhood schools to improve curriculum and student outcomes by providing them with the tools that they need to succeed. BCP has seen incredible results both in student achievement and teacher confidence in the classroom from their unique one-on-one approach.

BioStart
Baltimore Technology Institute (BTI) offers tuition free training to un and under employed Baltimore city residents who are high school graduates or have earned their G.E.D. Those interested in the program must be highly motivated with an interest in science and pursuing a new career path in the vibrant biotechnical industry. The total Laboratory Associates program timeframe spans six months, and participants must make the commitment to attend classes, study, be actively involved in their academic success, and complete an 100 hour paid internship. The BioSTART component of the BTI curriculum consists of a 12 week bridge program designed to advance participants’ knowledge in basic math, communication and professional development, each presented under the purview of the bio/lab based industry. Recipient of the Johns Hopkins Neighborhood Fund Grant in 2013.

City Steps
AIRS (AIDS Interfaith Residential Services) has developed a range of programming under the City Steps banner that addresses the specific problems of transition-aged homeless youth ages 14 to 24. Interventions at such a critical time in life have the capacity to be transforming, and in doing so, prevent future episodes of homelessness or exposure to trauma. The JHU Consultant Group put together a comprehensive list of funding sources to support City Steps’ programming for non-residential, community revitalization services (particularly life skills) for homeless and unstably-housed youth. Community School Initiative (CSI)
The Community School Initiative helps students of the Community School in Remington realize that science is not just about learning things that other people tell you; more importantly, science is a process of constant discovery. It’s about asking a question and then figuring out how to find the answer yourself. CSI plans, develops, and executes 1 to 2 hour scientific labs and demonstrations once every two weeks. Between laboratory weeks, brief talks on engaging subject are presented. Both the teachers and the students will get much out of this endeavor. Earl’s Place

Earl’s Place is a transitional housing program providing long-term (up to two years) housing and supportive services to seventeen men at a time. Residents are provided with a permanent address and a place to receive mail and phone calls. Most importantly, they have a place to call home, where concerns such as having a clean, safe place to sleep, shower, and keep their belongings is alleviated. For some this is the first time they have had a key to a place of their own. Ultimately, the residents are assisted in obtaining affordable, permanent housing, and one year of formal after care is provided to help ensure success.

Engineering Innovation
Engineering Innovation is an intensive, college-level, 4-week summer program for high school students. Students learn fundamental concepts in mechanical, civil, electrical and materials science engineering, and learn to apply math and science concepts to real world problems. Students are encouraged to think for themselves in order to build confidence and learn to think like engineers. Partnering with the Summer Jobs program, Engineering Innovation will target more Baltimore City students.

Food for Life
Food for Life is an experiential nutrition and food education program at Hampstead Hill Academy, a pre-K through 8th grade public charter school operated by the Baltimore Curriculum Project. Food for Life takes a positive, sensory-based approach to educating children about healthy eating patterns so that they can protect their health and diet throughout life. Students at Hampstead Hill Academy learn how to grow, cook, and identify the nutritional content of foods on a variety of platforms, including: a school garden, culinary arts club, classes during the school day, and quarterly community dinners. Food for Life offers a wealth of opportunities for volunteers to engage with students first-hand, and to contribute to research and data collection.

Groovy Science
Physicist Marc Clayton’s love for science led him to a second career—growing potential engineers and scientists. He developed a series of science shows, called Clayton’s Groovy Science, which he presents at elementary schools. In these lively, interactive programs, Clayton illustrates simple scientific concepts with the flair of a magician. The presentation shows kids the relevance of science in their everyday lives. His goal is to use these fun experiments to make a lasting impression.

Higher Achievement

Higher Achievement’s rigorous after-school and summer academic program gives youth from at-risk communities their best opportunity to succeed in middle school—and in life. The research-based program challenges middle school students to meet their full potential in three key areas: academics, social skills and leadership. When students get the skills and support they need to invest in their own success, they discover that they can be scholars. On average, 95 percent of Higher Achievement scholars who complete the program advance to top academic high schools and 93 percent advance to college. Higher Achievement is a 2011 recipient of the Johns Hopkins Neighborhood Fund and operates out of Collington Square Elementary/Middle School and City Springs Elementary and Middle in East Baltimore and Edgecombe Circle Elementary/Middle School in Central Baltimore.

Johns Hopkins Adopt-A-Class/Career Day Program

The Adopt-A-Class/Career Day Program mission is to introduce fourth graders at three local elementary schools—Tench Tilghman, City Springs and Inner Harbor East Academy—to the careers offered at hospitals and to expand their knowledge of career choices in general. To put theory into practice, four teams are created with three Johns Hopkins’ volunteers from different departments on each team. Each team is assigned to a fourth grade classroom. The teams visit the same classroom once a month for an hour from October through March to address a special topic. Each team member does a presentation on his/her part of the topic. At the end of each session, student questions are entertained, and they are able to record reflections of their experience in their journals.

LEAD Mentoring Program for Middle Schoolers
LEAD is a project-based after-school program for middle school students, which started a few years ago as an offshoot of Tutorial Project. Volunteers emphasize research-based learning that encourages mentors to not teach, but to guide students hone their skills of project planning, research and public speaking that they may not otherwise have access to. Previously, students built their own prototypes of ecofriendly buildings, research about cultural diversity etc. Also, there are other fun activities offered in collaboration with other student-run programs from the JHU Center for Social Concern. JHU mentors are paired with a Baltimore middle schooler and together the two will work on a project in keeping with the semester’s theme.

MERIT Baltimore

MERIT (The Medical Education Resources Initiative for Teens) transforms Baltimore City high school students into Baltimore’s health care leaders by preparing them for success in college and beyond. To accomplish these goals, MERIT provides a holistic support system for three years including weekly Saturday sessions focused on academic enrichment and college admissions guidance, paid summer internships in hospitals and laboratories, and longitudinal mentoring. Scholars are selected during their sophomore year of high school and participate in intensive MERIT programming until graduation, at which point they become MERIT alumni and receive continued guidance throughout college.

Music Teacher Mentor Program
The Music Teacher Mentor Program was founded in 1998 by then Peabody Preparatory Dean Fran Zarubick. Zarubick and others at Peabody wanted to address the high turnover rate among the city’s elementary and middle school music teachers, and at the same time promote the arts and engage the community. By pairing new music teachers with mentors from Peabody, the program stabilizes and improves the schools’ music programs and inspires a new generation of artists. On average, the program provides support to roughly 70 teachers in 70 schools.

Opera Outreach

Annually Opera Outreach produces a 50-minute opera for performance in schools and communities. The plot thread of the original is maintained, the main cuts coming in the choruses, the ballet sequences, and the music for the parents. The production is fully costumed, and presented on a unique revolving set. The presentation is framed by a brief introduction beforehand and a question-and-answer session afterwards, in which the audience gets to interact directly with the performers.

Talent Development High Schools and Middle Grades

Talent Development High Schools and Middle Grades are a comprehensive reform model for large high schools and middle grade schools that face serious problems with student attendance, discipline, achievement scores, and dropout rates. The model consists of specific changes in school organization and management to establish a strong, positive school climate for learning, curriculum and instructional innovations to transition all students into advanced high school work in English and mathematics, parent and community involvement activities to encourage college awareness, and professional development systems to support the implementation of the recommended reforms. The model was developed by the Johns Hopkins University and has been implemented at Frederick Douglass High School and other schools in Baltimore City since 2008.

Writers in Baltimore Schools

Writers in Baltimore Schools (WBS) seeks to provide low-income middle school students with a vibrant environment for literary development through in-school, after-school, and summer creative writing workshops taught by Baltimore college students. Compared to higher income peers, the reading assessment scores of low-income Baltimore students drop significantly between grades 5-8. WBS believes that by supplementing low-income students’ middle school language arts learning with an intensive program in literary reading and creative writing, these students can enter high school with a renewed interest in literature. WBS steps in where the traditional language arts classroom falls short by giving students a smaller, more participatory setting to hone reading and writing skills. WBS is a 2011 recipient of the Johns Hopkins Neighborhood Fund.

Year Up

Year Up Baltimore, launched in 2010, is Baltimore City’s first community college pilot program. It is a one-year, intensive training program that provides low-income young adults, ages 18 to 24, with a combination of hands-on skill development, college credits, and corporate internships. Students in Baltimore are dual-enrolled with a community college partner and have access to the library, tutoring resources, and other services offered by the college, in addition to the services offered by Year Up. By partnering closely with community colleges, Year Up hopes to share their expertise to reach many more disconnected young adults through the community college system. In 2012, the program will be offered on the Baltimore City Community College campus and will serve an estimated 64 young adults.

Associated Black Charities
Associated Black Charities (ABC) was founded in 1985 to represent and respond to issues of special significance to Maryland’s African American communities. Concerned that needs within these communities were not being adequately addressed, a group of area ministers and businessmen came together to call for an organization that would raise and distribute funds to organizations targeting needs within Maryland’s African American communities. ABC continues to address issues of economic empowerment and wealth building, as well as the growing health disparities impacting communities in the region.

Comiendo Juntas at Assisi House

Comiendo Juntas is a community program for seniors that started with the support of Baltimore City’s Commission on Aging to address Baltimore’s influx of aging Hispanic immigrants. Twice a month, approximately 20 Hispanic seniors gather at Assisi House at St. Patrick’s Church for food, community, and presentations from the community on relevant topics and services. Members of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine and Johns Hopkins Medicine International work together to secure volunteers, funding, and speakers from Hopkins, many of whom are bilingual students, clinicians and physicians who present on health topics relevant to the senior population, such as diabetes, nutrition, cancer, high blood pressure, stroke, heart health, and glaucoma.

Community-Faith-Hopkins Forums
The Community-Faith-Hopkins Forums reveal visions for the future of this community. The dialogues build relationships and trust as well as strategies for change. The Community-Faith-Hopkins Forums are about making connections and finding solutions. Through the forums, the Urban Health Institute is working to reestablish and strengthen ties between JH and the surrounding communities. Over the years ahead, the group will continue the Community-Faith-Hopkins Forums and expand the dialogues, inviting to the table neighbors and community and religious leaders to share ideas to build a healthier Baltimore community.

Community Impact Interns
The Community Impact Interns program is based on a simple proposition: that community engagement provides tangible benefits to JHU students and to the communities which they touch. The first class of 25 interns were matched with agencies and nonprofit organizations doing good work across the city and focus on a diverse set of city issues—assisting with disaster planning for emergency shelters, helping with a campaign to modernize public school buildings, working at a clinic serving the uninsured, or running afternoon activities for Baltimore kids.

Cooking 4 Love
Cooking 4 Love is an organization that combines cooking with service to community. Student volunteers will have the opportunity to not only learn how to cook and enjoy the meals they make, but also offers students a chance to benefit the community with their delicious creations. Once a week students deliver and serve food to a local women’s shelter in Baltimore. It is an eye-opening experience and during these weekly trips off campus, students see the diversity and culture of the community.

HEBCAC (Historic East Baltimore Community Action Coalition)

Historic East Baltimore Community Action Coalition is a nonprofit community development organization founded in 1994 by the Johns Hopkins University, city and state officials and area residents. Its mission is to work with residents and other stakeholders to improve neighborhoods in the 220-block area bounded by Edison Highway, Aisquith Street, North Avenue, and Fayette Street. Since its founding, HEBCAC has implemented a series of programs that address both the physical infrastructure and human capital issues faced by residents of the neighborhoods within which it works. HEBCAC is governed by a sixteen member board of directors that consists of nine elected community representatives, three members appointed by the Johns Hopkins University, The Johns Hopkins Hospital, and the Kennedy Krieger Institute, three members appointed by the City of Baltimore, and one member appointed by the Governor of Maryland. HEBCAC currently employs a professional staff of thirty. HEBCAC is a 2009 recipient of the Johns Hopkins Neighborhood Fund.

Homewood Community Partners Initiative (HCPI)
The Homewood Community Partners Initiative (HCPI) grows out of a greater understanding that the health and well-being of the Johns Hopkins University (JHU) Homewood campus is inextricably tied to the physical, social, and economic well-being of its surrounding neighborhoods. JHU’s response to that link comes from a combination of enlightened self-interest and a moral obligation that dates back to the founding of the university in 1876. Major urban universities, competing for talent, acknowledge that the off-campus experience in many ways rivals in importance a rich and well-established academic tradition.

Men and Families Center

The Men and Families Center improves the quality of relationships between fathers and their children, thus enhancing the preservation of families. The center is a coordinating place for East Baltimore men and their families that increases the accessibility of services and community awareness. The center addresses their specific needs through a holistic array of services that are designed to meet men where they are and move them toward self-empowerment. Various volunteer opportunities are available. The JHU Consultant Group helped develop a grant application on behalf of the center to the Abell Foundation for funds to implement a component of their newly-revitalized comprehensive male service program, Rites of Passage (a program for men, ages 17 to 25).

Neighborhood Design Center
Since its establishment in 1968, the mission of the nonprofit Neighborhood Design Center (NDC) has been to improve neighborhood livability, viability, and sustainability by providing pro-bono design and planning services in support of community-sponsored initiatives. NDC does this by mobilizing volunteer architects, planners, landscape architects, engineers, and other design professionals who donate their professional services to help groups in the initial stages of neighborhood revitalization efforts. NDC not only takes on projects that serve the public good but also strives to achieve the following community service goals: strengthening community participation in neighborhood improvement efforts; educating the public about the value of good design, planning, and preservation as community revitalization tools; and serving as a catalyst for increased investment in neighborhood development. Specific East Baltimore projects include McElderry Park Community Center, Patterson Dog Park, Amazing Port Street Gardens, Chesapeake Habitat, Baltimore City Charter Schools, and Butchers Hill Development.

Parks and People Foundation
Since 1984, Parks and People Foundation has worked to improve the quality of life in Baltimore’s neighborhoods. Staff, volunteers and partners in the community have developed innovative solutions to issues facing Baltimore City including the restoration of neighborhoods and its natural resources as well as the academic enrichment and motivation of community children. In order to realize the vision of a healthy environment where people live, work, learn and play, Parks and People have formed a strategy targeting two major fields of endeavor: Great Parks, Clean Streams and Green Communities—helping to improve the physical, social and environmental quality of neighborhoods through greening activities and forming networks among communities to sustain natural resources; and Motivating Youth—programs nurturing children and supporting communities by working together to provide enriching activities for youth. Parks and People Foundation is a 2009 Johns Hopkins Neighborhood Fund recipient.

Saint Vincent de Paul Roman Catholic Church

The Saint Vincent de Paul Roman Catholic Church’s Resource Exchange program addresses homelessness in Baltimore. The mission is to turn that empty rental unit into a home by providing basic furniture and household items. The program optimizes the chance of success for those newly housed, and it affirms for each of them that there are people who care and believe in them. Most importantly, it frees up HCH grant money to place more clients in places of their own. Recipient of the Johns Hopkins Neighborhood Fund Grant in 2014.

Salud

Salud is a Homewood campus initiative for Hispanic/Latino health. Salud seeks to alleviate the cultural and linguistic barriers that many Hispanics/Latinos in Baltimore encounter when seeking medical care. To accomplish this goal, Salud targets two populations. First, they target the Hispanic/Latino community itself through health fairs, health education presentations, and community outreach. Second, they target their health care providers and institutions through cultural competency training and interpretation services.

Southeast Emergency Needs Network (Food Closet)

This program provides emergency food and emergency funds for prescriptions to patients of the JH Bayview Medical Center, and the community at large. Each requestor is screened by social work staff to determine eligibility and make referrals for ongoing problems. Through a holiday food drive, Johns Hopkins Bayview staff contributes food and cash as the main support for the program. Community groups often assist during the holidays and some fundraising is undertaken to fill the gap.

Youth Ambassador Program - Baltimore Safe and Sound Campaign

The Youth Ambassador Program is designed to provide young people with the necessary tools and encouragement to mobilize their peers and neighbors in support of more opportunities for Baltimore’s children, youth and families. Youth in the program are of high school age and reside in Baltimore City—although a few members live in surrounding counties. The Youth Ambassadors advance the core goals to ensure children are born healthy, enter school ready to learn, succeed in school, have enriching and safe options in after-school hours, and live in neighborhoods free of gun violence. Youth Ambassadors work 5 to 10 hours per week and receive a stipend based on their hours and accomplishments. JHU serves on the board of directors.
