

Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center

A full-service academic medical center on a completely modernized 130-acre campus, Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center traces its history of patient care to the founding of its ancestor, the Baltimore City and County Almshouse, in 1773; to its decades of service as an innovative municipal facility known as Baltimore City Hospitals; and to its 1984 acquisition by The Johns Hopkins Hospital. Johns Hopkins Bayview physicians hold full-time faculty positions in the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. The medical center campus is home to three National Institutes of Health Intramural Research Program institutes: National Institute on Aging, National Institute on Drug Abuse and National Human Genome Research Institute.

Nationally and Internationally Recognized Care
