Since it was founded more than 100 years ago, The Johns Hopkins Hospital, an academic medical center located in Baltimore, MD, has been at the forefront of discovery, innovation and medical advances. Its reputation for excellence has earned a ranking among “America’s Best Hospitals” by U.S. News and World Report for more than two decades.

The Johns Hopkins Hospital and George Washington University Pediatric Residency

This program aims to develop physical therapists that will:

- Provide innovative and evidence-based care to the pediatric population.
- Advocate for and advance the integral role of physical therapy and rehabilitation in the management and prevention of impairments.
- Possess system skills such as outcome measurement, quality improvement, project management and leadership within an interdisciplinary team.
- Act as strong patient and family advocates.
- Sit for the ABPTS certification exam in pediatric physical therapy.

Program benefits:

- Salary and full-time benefits.
- One-on-one clinical mentoring.
- Variety of unique didactic experiences.
- Opportunity to participate in clinical research and graduate level teaching.
- Leadership skill development.

Details:

13.5-month residency includes 30 hours of clinical work and 20 hours of didactic experiences each week, as well as participation in scholarly activities and evidence-based practice.

- Exposure to the continuum of pediatric care including acute care, inpatient rehabilitation, school-based and early intervention services.
- Multi-disciplinary structured observations.
- Participation in scholarly activities including, case presentations, multi-disciplinary education, and clinical education.
- Choice of participation in a research or quality improvement project.
- Teaching at George Washington University.
- Participation in the Johns Hopkins Research Development Program.

For more information or to apply, contact

Julie Quinn, PT, MSEd
Board Certified in Pediatric Physical Therapy
Residency Program Director at jquinn25@jhu.edu