CLINICAL ACTIVITIES

Clinical Focus

I am focused on inpatient diabetes management and inpatient endocrinology. In 2019, I was selected as a member of the Academy of Clinical Excellence (ACE) at Johns Hopkins Community Physicians. This Academy parallels efforts of the prestigious Miller-Coulson Academy. As with the Miller Coulson Academy, membership requires a peer nomination and rigorous review process of a personal portfolio by internal and external reviewers. Since this selection, I contributed to the academy’s goal of promoting and highlighting clinical excellence at JHCP for the benefit of the community that we serve.

Clinical Program Building / Leadership

I established the first inpatient diabetes management service at Suburban Hospital and partnered with the transitional guide nurses and Community Health & Wellness to grow the program. This initiative helped reduce readmissions, length-of-stay and save the hospital over $953 thousand from January 2016 through June 2017. This program was regionally recognized and expanded to Howard County General Hospital in 2018 and Sibley Memorial Hospital in 2021. As Director of Endocrinology, Diabetes and Metabolism at JHCP, I oversee the clinical efforts of the endocrine groups at Suburban Hospital, HCGH, Sibley which together comprise five full-time and fourteen part-time providers. These groups have a history of sustained clinical excellence. Two programs have been recognized for their excellence with JHM Clinical Excellence Awards.

In 2018, I was named Division Chief of Endocrinology, and in 2020, I was selected as a Chair of the Department of Medicine at Suburban Hospital.

EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES

Educational Focus

I am a passionate educator and I spend considerable time teaching. I precept at the endocrinology fellow's clinic at the Johns Hopkins Outpatient Center and Johns Hopkins Comprehensive Diabetes Center, and teach endocrinology to Osler Internal Medicine Residents at Johns Hopkins Hospital. Additionally, I enjoy teaching allied health professionals. I precepted the endocrinology and diabetes rotation of 18 nurse practitioners at the Johns Hopkins School of Nursing, and assisted in training 12 PGY1 pharmacy residents at Suburban Hospital and more than 20 hospitalists at HCGH, Suburban and Sibley Hospitals.

I am recognizing that diabetes is a rapidly developing field with new technologies and anti-diabetes medications being approved by the FDA almost monthly. I established the first Diabetes Symposium for primary care providers at Suburban Hospital in 2016. This has since become a biannual event involving community endocrinologists and faculty from JH SOM, NIH and Kaiser Permanente as speakers. More than 300 primary care providers, endocrinologists, advance practice providers and nurse practitioners have participated in these symposia.

RESEARCH ACTIVITIES

Research Focus

While my focus is on clinical excellence, my research in the genetics of adrenal tumors, health disparities research and quality improvement has received national recognition. My discovery journey took off during my fellowship at the National Institutes of Health under the mentorship of Constantine A. Stratakis, MD and Maya Lodish, MD. During my time at the Section on Endocrinology and Genetics, NICHD, NIH, I developed a particular interest in rare genetic diseases. My research team was able to identify novel mutations in the ARMC5 gene as a cause of macronodular adrenal hyperplasia and Cushing syndrome.

I became the lead Associate Investigator of the clinical trial studying adrenal tumors, focusing on primary aldosteronism and continued this extramural work while at the JHM. My investigative work led to the discovery that germline ARMC5 variants are associated with primary aldosteronism and my work was recognized with a Cardiovascular Endocrinology Award in 2017.

Most recently, I transitioned my skills in research and analytics into quality improvement work, systems innovation, and program building.

Research Program Building / Leadership

2015-present Special volunteer, Section on Endocrinology and Genetics, Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, MD.

- Collaborated with the National Human Genome Research Institute and Ohio State University, which led to confirmation of our findings (ARMC5 plays a role in the regulation of blood pressure) in thousands of Black hypertensive patients (OR Publication 12, 15, Review 5).
- This health disparities research led to the start of another ongoing trial at

NIH, where I serve as an Associate Investigator.

SYSTEM INNOVATION AND QUALITY IMPROVEMENT ACTIVITIES

System Innovation Focus

I established an Inpatient Diabetes Management Service (IDMS) at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, MD and expanded the initiative to Howard County General Hospital, Columbia, MD and Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington, DC. The IDMS is a special diabetes clinical consultation services designed to promote better glycemic control and reduce hypoglycemia and glucose-related safety challenges in hospitalized patients.
