

The Johns Hopkins Women's Mood Disorders Center is conducting a research study interested in Bipolar Disorder in pregnancy.

You may be eligible if:

- You are taking Lamotrigine for Bipolar Disorder and intend to continue throughout pregnancy and postpartum
- You are no more than 20 weeks pregnant

Your participation will include:

- Monthly visits during pregnancy and three postpartum visits
- Mood evaluations and blood draws
- Your infant will be given a brief, non-invasive neurological and behavioral assessment at each postpartum visit
