To SOM Faculty Members, Clinical and Research Trainees, Staff Members and Students,

Please join the Division of Research Integrity in welcoming Ahmet Hoke, professor of neurology and chair of the Committee on Outside Interests, and Stephanie Shea, senior associate general counsel and chief compliance officer, for a discussion about policy and processes for addressing and navigating conflicts of interest. Offering insight and sharing their experiences will be Jennifer Elisseff, professor of ophthalmology and biomedical engineering and former chair of the Committee on Outside Interests, and Nickolas Papadopoulos, professor of oncology and pathology. Both successfully navigated the conflict of interest landscape at the school of medicine (SOM).

This program is part of the school's research integrity program, and attendance will be recorded. Those attending will earn responsible conduct of research (RCR) credit. The colloquium will be held on Sept. 20 via Zoom from 2–3:30 p.m., and advance registration is required — please visit jhjm.zoom.us/webinar/register/WN\_E2ktPCI6QD0lw3h70eIXOO.

The Research Integrity Colloquia are core components of the RCR program, which is administered by the Division of Research Integrity. Everyone who participates in research at the SOM is required to complete RCR training.
