

Tobacco Treatment Clinic

About our Practice

The Johns Hopkins Tobacco Treatment Clinic was established in 2018. The center is made up of a multi-disciplinary team of nurses, physicians and a certified tobacco treatment specialist. We evaluate patient's smoking topography, understanding that tobacco dependence will be treated as any other medical condition that needs to be controlled.

At our practice, we provide support, an encouraging environment and a team to help assure treatment and strategies are effective, without any fear or guilt placed on the patient.

Further, we see patients (16 and older) who use combustible cigarettes, electronic cigarettes, and other forms of tobacco products.

Personalized (and Personal) Approach

We aim to provide a smoking cessation plan that meets the patient's individualized needs with reasonable goals and expectations. We attempt to find the most successful combination of treatments in order to assure a successful and sustainable smoking cessation. Further, we provide additional community resources to allow for patients to continue their strategies beyond the clinic.

Lung Cancer Screening: Each patient that attends the clinic is also evaluated to see if they qualify for lung cancer screening, which can be performed the same day they are seen in clinic.
